

Editors' meeting. Organiser: Dieter Stein

The lively and overflowing workshop discussion of Open Access and the publication culture at the Leiden (SLE 2016) has made it abundantly clear that there is a fundamental interest in issues surrounding scholarly publication. It therefore seems appropriate to pick up on this interest and have a follow-up session at SLE 2016 and turn it into a permanent meeting at SLE conferences. The Editors' Meeting will deal with all aspects of the generation and dissemination of scientific knowledge as well as modes of participation in scientific discourse. These are currently undergoing significant changes, leading to new questions, tasks and challenges for journal editing and for the management of scientific discourse. The session will exchange experience, views, policies and competence to ensure that scholarly communication is best served with the highest standards available in the age of, e.g., new communicational affordances like the Internet and new ways of computational data management.
